One extraordinary golf story is that of Brett Stanford, who entered the Guinness World Records by making a 124 meter monster putt. Brett had been playing golf for about 15 years and was a mid-handicapper with a decent short game, but the longest putt he had made before this was around 12 meters. He and his friends discovered that the record was 114 meters and decided to try to break it. They found a course in good shape that was willing to give them exclusive access to a hole for a significant length of time. The manager of Point Walter in Perth, Australia, gave them exclusive access to the 5th hole for an entire day. Early on, they realized that the previous mark would be really hard to beat, but they were optimistic that it was possible. One of the big issues early on was consistency. When trying to make a full swing with a putter, it is very easy to spray the ball or top it. When Brett started to focus on a more compact putting motion, it proved to be a good move. Shortening the swing really helped him keep the blade at the right angle and aided consistency. After that, he needed to nail the pace as he was short, long and even slammed one into the flagstick. That really hurt. It was about 90 minutes in and his friend Scott was shouting “Get in. Come on, get in”. His arms were waving, his volume was increasing and then, bang, Brett heard the ball hit the flagstick and his friends groan in disbelief. Would he get any closer than that for the rest of the day? It seemed like the answer was no, but just as things were beginning to get tedious, he hit one on the right line, right out of the sweet spot. It travelled up the left side of the fairway, onto the green and began curling down towards the hole. Again, he could hear Scott egging it on. He encouraged it and encouraged it and then he started screaming and celebrating, which was Brett’s cue to go nuts. He had broken a Guinness World Record and it felt fantastic. Isn’t that amazing?

Ethan Swanepoel 13th Hole & Almiro de Oliveira 16th Hole... Congratulations!

Just joking...

My stockbroker's a golf nut. One day he called up and he said, "Guess what? I just broke 80! I said, "I know. I'm one of them."

And finally...

Please Remember to Fill YOUR Divots & Repair YOUR Pitch Marks!

ALWAYS CARRY A SANDBAG / BOTTLE & MAKE SURE IT IS REGULARLY FILLED UP.

Yours in Golf!
