MONTHLY PRIZE DRAW...

Par 3 | Distances measured to CENTER of GREEN.
This is not only the longest, but also the most difficult par 3 on the course. The prevailing South Easterly wind can make the tee shot over water, to a green bordered left and right, very challenging. A river on the right, runs the length of the hole.

The Day the Wind Cheated Everyone Except One

There are golf stories that fade with the scorecard, and then there are the ones that live forever in the hush of a gallery, in the grin of old pros at the bar, and in the whispered lessons passed from one golfer to the next.

It was the final round of the Open Championship at St. Andrews, the kind of Sunday that feels carved into golfing history before the first tee shot is even struck. The leaderboard was tight — three players tied at -8, the kind of deadlock that makes crowds roar louder and caddies sweat harder.

But Mother Nature had a trick up her sleeve.

The wind came early — not the kind that nudges a ball, but the kind that grabs it by the collar and hauls it two fairways over. Flags bent, caps blew off, and drives that should have been heroic rolled into bunkers like runaway children. The old course was laughing, its ancient humps and hollows daring the world's best to figure it out.

By the 16th hole, the leaders had all but crumbled. One shanked into the Swilcan Burn, another four-putted from 12 feet, and the third looked like he'd rather be home trimming his hedges than fighting crosswinds in Fife. The Open — the Open — was slipping into chaos.

And then came the quiet man.

Tommy Ellison. A journeyman. A pro's pro. The kind of golfer you see in the field every week but whose name rarely makes the headlines. No one picked him to win. Even his sponsor's logo looked apologetic.

But Tommy had grown up playing on linksland, chasing balls across windswept Scottish dunes where the seagulls flew sideways. To him, this wasn't punishment. This was home.

While others tried to fight the wind, Tommy danced with it. He kept the ball low, chipping seven irons where others wailed with drivers. He laughed at the gusts, hooded clubs, punched shots, and ran them onto the greens like a man skipping stones across a pond.

On the 18th, as the crowd swelled over the valley of the Swilcan Bridge, Tommy hit a three-quarter punch 6-iron that skipped twice, rolled across the apron, and cozied up three feet from the cup. He tapped in for birdie. The gallery erupted, not because they were watching a superstar, but because they were watching a man who had golf in his bones.

He finished -9. Champion Golfer of the Year.

In the press tent, when someone asked him how he managed to keep his head when everyone else lost theirs, Tommy grinned and said:

"The wind doesn't cheat you. It just asks you if you're smart enough to listen."

And in that moment, golf reminded the world why it is the cruelest, fairest, most beautiful game ever invented.
